Guide Children's Media Choices

With the explosion of technology now available, it seems like children are always plugged in, zoned out, or wired for sound. They spend less time outside, have shorter attention spans, and are exposed to online dangers such as pornography. On the positive side, technology has expanded children's knowledge and opportunities. They learn teamwork, problem-solving, and communication skills. Technology has also boosted activism among today's young people.

Although children may seem like "experts" when it comes to technology and new media, parents are still responsible for supervising what their kids are exposed to—and for how long. Two keys are moderation and interaction. These tips can help you limit and monitor what your kids see and hear:

Strategically set up your equipment and schedules. Keep televisions out of children's bedrooms, and place the computer in an accessible family area. Make media time contingent on the completion of chores and homework. Plan alternate activities, including physical ones.

Establish digital-free zones. Agree on days and times (such as dinner, family night, Sundays, etc.) when no one—including adults—is allowed to check e-mail or use any form of media.

Watch and listen to TV shows, movies, and music together. Talk about the issues that come up. Tie them into faith and provide a biblical worldview for children to consider as they use technology.

What's Up in Our Wired World?

- The average young American spends nearly every waking minute in front of an electronic device. Kids ages 8 to 18 spend more than 7.5 hours a day using computers or smart phones or watching TV. And because they multitask, they pack almost 11 hours of media content into that time. (Kaiser Family Foundation)
- 87% of parents play video games with their kids at least occasionally. (Yahoo! Shine)
- 20% of young people admit they've engaged in "sexting"—emailing or receiving nude photos or videos. (Associated Press-MTV)

Ask God:

1. For wisdom as you oversee your children's media "diet."
2. To help your kids make good decisions about technology.
3. To show you ways to use technology in positive, family-building ways.

Parenting Insights

In Children's Ministry Magazine, online expert Tracy Carpenter explores some ways that technology is impacting young hearts and minds.

1. Shifting relationships— Although kids still belong to social groups, the emphasis is no longer on face-to-face gatherings. Preteens, wired for relationships, now think in terms of their "audience" rather than their peer group.
2. Trying on identities— Children express their developing personalities through social-networking sites and online role-playing. Preteens, emulating "cool," may try to outdo one another with suggestive images.
3. Providing "TMI"— Young people still forming judgment and boundaries are sharing too much private information in very public ways.

OpenTheBook

"Look! I stand at the door and knock. If you hear my voice and open the door, I will come in. ...Anyone with ears to hear must listen to the Spirit."

Revelation 3:20, 22

God may not be able to IM or text us, but he wants a relationship that goes beyond weekly worship. God is available 24/7 and—best of all—no special device is needed to talk to him!

Teachable Moments

1. The Wired Word—

Challenge children to think how the Bible would be different if technology had existed in Jesus' time. How would a Twitter version of your favorite Scripture verse read? How would you describe one of Jesus' miracles to a friend via text message? If Jesus had a TV ad campaign, what would it look and sound like?

2. Tech Commandments—

When you're establishing rules for media usage, involve children in the decisions. Ask them what "commandments" God might have set for online behavior and how we interact with others using technology. What would he have made off-limits, and what would he have encouraged? What age requirements or time constraints might he have established, and why?

"So commit yourselves wholeheartedly to these words of mine. Tie them to your hands and wear them on your forehead as reminders. Teach them to your children. Talk about them when you are at home and when you are ON THE ROAD, when you are going to bed and when you are getting up." Deuteronomy 11:18-19, NLT

Open the lines of communication about media and technology by asking your children these discussion-starting questions:

1. How does technology make life easier for you? How does it make life harder or more complicated?
2. What's a good number of hours to spend in front of electronic devices each day? How can you tell when you've overdone it?
3. What's your favorite way to use technology, and how would you cope without it?
4. What are some ways we can honor God with our media habits?

Family Experience: Say What?

Encourage your family members to stay in constant communication with God by using these experiences from Group's Hands-On Bible:

- Listen Up—Read aloud Exodus 19:1-9, 16-25. Say: "God spoke to Moses in a powerful voice. But most people would never say they've heard God speaking aloud." Brainstorm ways God speaks to us today; for example, through the Bible, through other Christians, to our hearts. Read aloud John 16:13-15. Have family members each take a Bible to a place where they can be alone. Say: "Pray about school, home, a problem—anything! Open your Bible and read. Ask God to help you hear what he wants you to say." After 10 minutes, share your experiences. Say: "Sometimes God will speak to you loud and clear. Sometimes you won't even know God said anything until later. But God is talking. Just keep listening!"
- "Excuse Me..."—Talk about ways we get other people's attention these days and how it feels to fail to "connect" with someone. Then play this game to help you start thinking about God's voice. Have family members each think up a line from a movie or TV show. Then take turns saying the line using the same voice the character has. See who can guess the movie or show, as well as the character. Then ask: "How did you recognize the voices and programs?" Read 1 Samuel 3:1-10. Ask: "Why did it take Samuel awhile to figure out who was talking? What are some ways God gets our attention? How can we recognize God's voice?"

What's Playing at the Movies

Movie: Alice in Wonderland (opens March 5)

Genre: Fantasy/adventure

Rating: PG: Parental discretion is a must for this dark fantasy action/violence involving scary images and situations, and for a smoking caterpillar

Cast: Mia Wasikowska, Johnny Depp, Anne Hathaway

Synopsis: In director Tim Burton's sequel to Lewis Carroll's stories, 19-year-old Alice revisits Wonderland and reunites with her childhood friends. They need her help to overthrow the evil Red Queen and the Jabberwock dragon. As Alice discovers her voice, she becomes an empowered heroine—evident through how she grows in size throughout the film.

Discussion Questions: What are the best things about being a child? What are you most looking forward to about growing up, and why? Read 1 Samuel 17:32-50. Think of a time when you've felt like David. What kind of "giants" have you faced? Where do you get power and strength?

What Music Is Releasing

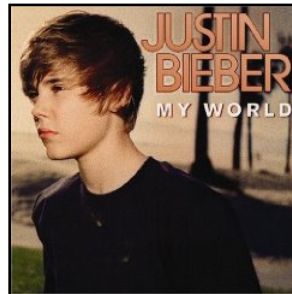

Artist: Justin Bieber

Album: My World

Artist Info: Bieber, an R&B phenom who just turned 16, was named one of the hottest stars of 2009. A self-taught musician from Canada, Bieber gained fame through YouTube. He's the first artist to have four singles from a debut album reach Billboard's Top 40 before the album's release. Bieber also sings the first line in the new "We Are the World" video.

Summary: The first part of Bieber's debut album, My World, released in November. The hit single "One Time" features guest vocals from hip-hop star Usher. In "One Less Lonely Girl," Bieber sings: "I'm gonna put you first, I'll show you what you're worth if you let me inside your world."

Discussion Questions: Where does your "worth" come from? What are some situations that make you feel lonely? Read aloud Hebrews 13:5b. How can God's promise of never abandoning you change your life?

Culture & Trends

What's happening right now that may affect your children and family:

- Parents are toning down children's birthday parties, due to the recession. Instead of hosting lavish events, more parents are letting their kids choose a special outing or meal. (msnbc.com)
- Children are more likely to get bullied when they struggle with nonverbal communication, reading nonverbal cues, and coming up with options for resolving social conflict, researchers say. (livescience.com)

Quick Stats

- Children as young as 3 have negative bias against older people. Preschoolers who aren't biased have regular contact with senior citizens. (University of Alberta)

- About 1.3 million children under the age of 18 live with their grandparents. (healthychildren.org)

Your Child has a Conscience

God has placed a conscience inside your child to help your child do four things: Do what's right, deal with wrongs, be honest, and care about others.

The Bible uses the word conscience 30 times in the New Testament. Twenty of those times by the Apostle Paul, five were written to Timothy to help him understand the importance of the conscience as a young pastor.

The biblical concept of the conscience is important for parents to understand. After all, if it's standard operating equipment inside of your child, placed there by God, you'll want to work with it and help strengthen it.

The conscience helps a child become internally motivated. Unfortunately, many children rely on external prompters, including their parents, to get things done. And unfortunately, many parents encourage their kids in that direction by over-emphasizing bribes and threats.

We're not suggesting that you have to get rid of the rewards and punishments. We do know though that the primary goal is to help children develop an internal motivation to do the right thing.

Be on the lookout for internal motivation in your kids and affirm it. When your child takes initiative to help, apologizes for a wrong, tells the truth, or does the right thing even when it's tough, use the opportunity to affirm the God-given initiative coming from the heart.

As you work to strengthen and develop the conscience in your child, you'll see more and more internal motivation. When you focus on the conscience good things happen.

The Conscience Needs Training

In 1 Corinthians 4:4 Paul says, "My conscience is clear, but that doesn't make me innocent." The reality is that just because the conscience prompts a person, doesn't mean that it's right. Children need to be careful to obey God first in everything they do.

The conscience looks for convictions in order to prompt a person to do what's right. Most children already have convictions, but many of those convictions are inappropriate or need some adjustment. For example, some children believe that if they're playing with a video game and Mom asks them to do something, they should be able to wait until they get to the next level to obey.

Your daughter may believe that she has the right to hit her annoying brother. After all, he deserves it.

You have convictions and part of your God-given responsibility is to pass those convictions on to your child. One of the greatest ways to do that is by analyzing your family rules. Each rule, whether it's written down or just understood, has a conviction behind it. Spend some time evaluating the convictions behind your rules and then talking with your kids about them.

Children may be tempted to rebel against rules but sharing them as convictions makes them easier to accept. "Son, we don't watch that kind of movie in our home, because we have a conviction that what goes into our minds affects our hearts. We're Christians. That's who we are and this movie isn't consistent with the conviction we have. So, we have to say no."

As much as possible, tie your convictions to God's Word. After all, you cannot let your conscience be your guide. It's the scriptures that are our authority in life. The determining factor as to whether something is right or wrong rests on the authority of God's Word.
